James Lawrence Massey Quintano

James Lawrence Massey Quintano, born on August 9, 1973, in the picturesque county of Kent, Great Britain, embarked on a remarkable journey that would lead him to become a prominent figure in the world of property management and maintenance.

At just three months old, James's family relocated to Freeport, Grand Bahamas, driven by his father's career prospects. He spent his formative years on the beautiful Bahamian islands, attending Saint Paul's School until the age of 16. During this time, he cherished visits to his paternal grandparents in Gzira, Malta, and his maternal grandparents in Holmes Chapel, Great Britain, enriching his cultural experiences.

In 1989, at the age of 16, James made another significant move, this time to the United States. He settled in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and diligently pursued his education at Stranahan High School, where he earned his high school diploma.

After completing his studies, James embarked on a diverse career journey. He initially worked in warehouses supplying cruise ships, before transitioning to Publix warehouses. Unfortunately, in 2002, he suffered a severe shoulder injury, prompting a change in career direction.

Undeterred by adversity, James ventured into the air conditioning (A/C) industry. Over time, he gained valuable experience working for several A/C companies. His entrepreneurial spirit, combined with a strong work ethic, led him to join forces with his friend Alex Sylvia to establish their own A/C company. Although they faced licensing challenges, this setback didn't deter James's ambition.

James's career took an exciting turn when he assumed the role of a supervisor at Century Village Maintenance and Management. His dedication and leadership abilities quickly propelled him to the position of CEO, where he oversaw the management of this renowned property.

While at the helm of Century Village Maintenance and Management, James identified opportunities for expansion and diversification. He seized the chance to acquire "Joe Doraty Lawn Care" alongside his brother, Kyle. This business thrived in West Palm Beach, Florida, allowing James to maintain a harmonious balance between his professional commitments.

In 2008, Century Village Maintenance and Management underwent a transformation, leading James to explore new horizons. In 2009, alongside his brother Kyle and father Patrick Quintano, he co-founded East Coast Maintenance & Management (ECMM). Under his dynamic leadership, ECMM has continued to flourish, offering top-tier property management and maintenance services.

Today, James Quintano stands as a testament to resilience, determination, and entrepreneurship. His journey from humble beginnings in Kent, Great Britain, to becoming a pivotal figure in the property management and maintenance industry in the United States is a testament to his unwavering commitment to excellence and the pursuit of his dreams.
